Generation gap on working

Multiple Generations in Y.2026

- ❑ Baby Boomer (1946-1964) : Age 61-79
- ❑ Generation X (1965-1980) Age 45-60
- ❑ Gen Y (1980-1995) Age 30-45
- ❑ Gen Z (1996-2011) Age 14-29
- ❑ ALPHA (2010-2024) Age 1-15
- ❑ Beta (2012-2024) Age 1-13

Behavior of multiple generations

Baby Boomer (1946-1964) : Age 61-79

“ The retired hipsters-living life with the fullest , staying fit , and staying digitally connected.

- ❑ Over 85% of Baby Boomers check their smartphones and go online at least once a day, and more than 31% are online almost constantly.
- ❑ Boomers have also shown an impressive ability to adapt quickly to the digital world and e-commerce.

Generation X (1965-1980) Age 45-60

“ Emotionally rich and ready pay if it’s worth. Still chasing the good old days ”

- In the workplace, this generation is highly adaptable, tech-understand , and emotionally stable, allowing them to manage workplace dynamics more effectively than other generations.

Their emotional and financial stability also positions them as one of the leading consumer groups for high-end, luxury products.

Gen Y (1980-1995) Age 30-45

The Tired Generation of 2025” – Seeking daily motivation, life balance, and a sense of freedom

- The Tri-Life Crisis has become a shared struggle for many Millennials, who are now facing the pressure of managing work stress, achieving financial stability, starting families, and living up to various expectations of success—all by the time they reach their 30s.

Gen Z (1996-2011) Age 14-29

The Trendsetters of the Digital World

- Gen Z is increasingly drawn to jobs that offer more freedom and align with their personal passions. Many have turned to becoming online creators, TikTokers, and social media influencers—transforming themselves into the driving force behind today's digital trends.

ALPHA (2010-2024) Age 1-15

"Shaping the Future of the World" —

Driven by a Desire to Improve Quality of Life for All

Generation Alpha is growing up fully immersed in the digital world, and this deep connection has shaped their aspirations. Among their top career dreams is becoming content creators. Looking ahead, it's likely that entirely new roles and professions will emerge within the digital space—roles designed to support and empower Gen Alpha as they step fully into the workforce of the future.

- ❑ Gen Beta is the persons who are born from 2025-2039 and will grow on the period of AI and technologies.
- ❑ Gen Beta is expected to be highly adaptive to technology,
- ❑ AI will become an integral part of their daily lives—supporting their education, work, and lifestyle.
- ❑ Growing up with a strong awareness of the risks that come with the digital world, they are likely to become a generation that shapes the course of the future for decades to come.

THANK YOU
